

Changing the World, One Life at a Time.

WORLD COMMUNION SUNDAY

"Cultivating a group of people who can really support our faith traditions... is an incredible part of the future. Preparing ourselves for the future and providing competent and proficient leaders in The United Methodist Church is essential."

— PAUL NIELSEN

Photo: John Garbano

Changing the World, One Life at a Time.

WORLD COMMUNION SUNDAY

"Cultivating a group of people who can really support our faith traditions... is an incredible part of the future. Preparing ourselves for the future and providing competent and proficient leaders in The United Methodist Church is essential."

— PAUL NIELSEN

Photo: John Garbano

“Being a recipient of the scholarship makes me feel I’m cared about.”

“Being an Asian American in this culture, a lot of times I’ve questioned who I was and where I belonged,” said Paul Nielsen, an active United Methodist and World Communion Sunday Ethnic Minority Scholarship recipient. Paul attends Spring Arbor University in Michigan.

Born in South Korea but adopted and raised in the United States, Paul recalls times he felt he did not belong in either the majority or the minority culture. “But knowing I can always find my identity in Christ . . . that’s given me comfort every single time,” he added.

Relating to others in his church, on mission trips and in college has helped Paul mature in his faith and his commitment to help others. Paul works as a peer advisor to new students at Spring Arbor.

“It’s not so much a job to me as it is a privilege. I get to serve students and work with people because that’s my overall passion,” said Paul. He is working on his Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology with a minor in business administration. Concerned about the decline in healthy marriages, he wants to become a marriage and family therapist.

Your gifts to the World Communion Sunday offering equips racial and ethnic students in the United States and international students to transform the church and communities.

To read more stories of how the World Communion Sunday offering changes lives and to donate online, go to www.umcsgiving.org/giveWCS.

“Being a recipient of the scholarship makes me feel I’m cared about.”

“Being an Asian American in this culture, a lot of times I’ve questioned who I was and where I belonged,” said Paul Nielsen, an active United Methodist and World Communion Sunday Ethnic Minority Scholarship recipient. Paul attends Spring Arbor University in Michigan.

Born in South Korea but adopted and raised in the United States, Paul recalls times he felt he did not belong in either the majority or the minority culture. “But knowing I can always find my identity in Christ . . . that’s given me comfort every single time,” he added.

Relating to others in his church, on mission trips and in college has helped Paul mature in his faith and his commitment to help others. Paul works as a peer advisor to new students at Spring Arbor.

“It’s not so much a job to me as it is a privilege. I get to serve students and work with people because that’s my overall passion,” said Paul. He is working on his Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology with a minor in business administration. Concerned about the decline in healthy marriages, he wants to become a marriage and family therapist.

Your gifts to the World Communion Sunday offering equips racial and ethnic students in the United States and international students to transform the church and communities.

To read more stories of how the World Communion Sunday offering changes lives and to donate online, go to www.umcsgiving.org/giveWCS.